Miss Eva Rosenfield handsome, athetic and a New York belle, is the hereine of Arverne, L. I. To-day while on a catamaran a mile from shore she jumped overboard and rescued Dr. Julius Rosenberg, one of Arverne's leading doctors, from drowning.

Miss Rosenfield was in her bathing costume, and had swam to the catamaran, where she stopped to rest, While sitting on the crossplece lookng out to sea she heard a cry for help. Two hundred feet away a man was truggling in the water.

The young woman shouted encouragement, telling him to make for the craft. and she would pull him ashore. Dr. Rosenberg answered that he had been seized with cramps, but would try. He managed to cover 100 feet, but ould go no further and began to sink, Miss Rosenfield realizing that she was he only person who could render him id, jumped into the water and swam to him.

William Legessi, a beach life-saver, had seen the rescue and put out in a boat and brought both to shore.
